

Peugeot Honda buyout reports are false™

Contributed by Administrator
Sunday, 28 December 2008

Peugeot has sought to dispel suggestions linking it to a take-over of Honda's defunct F1 operation - insisting it is fully committed to sportscars and Citroën to the World Rally Championship.

Peugeot has branded as "totally false" speculation linking it to a potential buy-out of the assets of Honda's defunct Formula 1 team, insisting that it is suffering just as much as any other car manufacturer in the current economic climate.

It had been reported in Belgian motorsport magazine Autosportnieuws that PSA Peugeot-Citroën "whose last involvement in the top flight came as an engine-supplier to the ill-fated Prost Grand Prix concern in the late 1990s and into the turn of the Millennium" had added its name to the list of parties interested in the purchase of the Brackley-based outfit.

According to formula1sport.net